MING Shipwreck Artefacts by Asean Heritage Museum Group

The 8 pieces of rare Ming Shipwreck artefacts belong to the Asian Heritage Museum (AHM) Group based in Kuala Lumpur. These authenticated artefacts are part of a large and diverse collection of Asian and geological artefacts, which was acquired legally via a Kuala Lumpur High Court Order in 2010 in lieu of a large debt owed by a foreign explorer who absconded.

AHM has recently, secured the tenancy of the iconic national heritage site, where most of the Constitution was written between 1955 to 1957 and which the Merdeka (Independence) Agreement of Malaya was signed on 5 August 1957.

In September and October 2017, AHM has organised the Jalan Merdeka (Road to Independence) Exhibition, with a very comprehensive perspective of Malayan history up to Independence, at Carcosa and Seri Negara in conjunction with the Department of Museums Malaysia, National Archive, National Film Board and the New Straits Times.

Based on its own collection of diverse and museum quality artefacts, AHM intends to set up a world-class and innovative heritage and peace museum at Carcosa. It is also setting up an artefacts trading & exhibition and performing arts centre at Seri Negara.

The Advisory Council of AHM comprises eminent public personalities such as minister Datuk Seri Dr Wan Juanidi Tuanku Jaafar, writer and think tank founder Tunku Zain Al-'Abidin Tuanku Jaafar, economist and former senior civil servant Tan Sri Ramon Navaratnam and Dean of Faculty of Medicine, University of Malaya and Chairman of Malaysian Aids Council, Prof Dato' Dr Adeeba Kamarulzaman.

AHM has decided to sell off some of its artefacts in order to raise some capital to further fund the repair, restoration and refurbishing of Carcosa and Seri Negara and to set up the heritage and peace museum and arts centre. Senior officials of a leading government-linked auction house in China, visited AHM in Kuala Lumpur from 22 Sept to 24 Sept 2017 and selected many similar Ming shipwreck artefacts for the coming autumn auctions in Beijing in December 2017.
